Notes for Daniel Paul Kennedy:
General Notes:
Dan was raised in Tankersly, Texas. He had a cousin named Wilson Pierce who went swimming and fishing with Dan. They were always close friends. Dan went to something called the CeeCee's as a young man. It was where young men signed up to go to Oregon to cut timber. This was during the "hard 1930's" when money was scarce, so any job was taken.

When Dan met Verna, he was working in a creamery bottling milk. Before his first child was born, he worked in an oil field West of San Angelo. When WWII came, Dan's friends signed up for the SeaBees. Since Dan thought he would be drafted, he signed up also. He was sent to training near Oxnard California. Verna and daughter moved to San Diego to be near him till he shipped out. The SeaBees were responsible for building roads and landing areas for planes. He worked in the South Pacific on islands such as Guam. He told stories of sniper attacks and digging up mines with the earth movers he drove.

After World War II, he attended a trade school to learn carpentry. He and Verna bought a farm between Risingstar and Crossplains, Texas. Later the
